Study Online with Open Christian University and Earn a State-licensed Qualification from California, USA

What Is the Apocrypha and Why Wasn't It Included in the Bible?

Sixbert SANGWA • August 21, 2024

The Apocrypha, a collection of ancient writings, holds a significant yet debated position in the history of Christianity. The term "Apocrypha" means "hidden" or "concealed," and it refers to a group of books that were written during the intertestamental period, the time between the Old and New Testaments. These texts were not included in the canon of Scripture as recognized by most Protestant Christians, leading to ongoing discussions about their value and role in the faith.

The Apocrypha includes books such as Tobit, Judith, Wisdom, Sirach (Ecclesiasticus), Baruch, and 1 and 2 Maccabees, among others. These texts are found in the Septuagint, the Greek translation of the Old Testament, which was widely used in the early Christian church. However, they were not included in the Hebrew Bible, the Tanakh, which is the canon recognized by Judaism.

The Canonization Process and Exclusion of the Apocrypha

To understand why the Apocrypha was not included in the Bible, it is essential to explore the process of canonization—the method by which certain books were recognized as divinely inspired and thus authoritative Scripture. The early church fathers sought to establish a canon that accurately reflected the teachings and revelations of God, as handed down through the prophets and apostles.
Several criteria were considered in this process:

1. Apostolic Authorship: Books were more likely to be included in the canon if they were believed to have been written by the apostles or their close associates. The Apocryphal books do not claim apostolic authorship, which was a key reason for their exclusion.
2. Consistency with Established Scripture: The early church sought to include texts that were consistent with the doctrinal teachings found in the already recognized Scriptures. Some Apocryphal books contained teachings or historical inaccuracies that conflicted with the accepted books of the Old Testament.
3. Widespread Acceptance: The early Christian community generally recognized the canonical books as authoritative across various regions and congregations. The Apocrypha, however, did not enjoy this same level of universal acceptance among the early church fathers.
4. Divine Inspiration: Above all, the texts included in the canon were those believed to be divinely inspired, a belief based on the guidance of the Holy Spirit (2 Timothy 3:16). The Apocryphal books, while valued for their historical and moral teachings, were not universally considered to have been inspired in the same way as the canonical Scriptures.

The Reformation and the Apocrypha

The status of the Apocrypha became a particularly significant issue during the Protestant Reformation. Martin Luther and other Reformers questioned the inclusion of the Apocryphal books in the Bible, largely because they were not part of the Hebrew canon. They argued that only the books recognized by the Jewish tradition as Scripture should be considered canonical for Christians as well.

Luther placed the Apocrypha in a separate section between the Old and New Testaments in his German Bible, noting that while these books were "not equal to the Holy Scriptures," they were still "useful and good to read." This distinction set the stage for the Protestant tradition, which generally excludes the Apocrypha from the canon, in contrast to the Catholic and Orthodox traditions, which include them in their Bibles, though often with a distinction from the canonical books.

Theological and Doctrinal Considerations

One of the key reasons the Apocrypha was not included in the Protestant Bible involves theological and doctrinal concerns. Some teachings found in the Apocryphal books, such as the concept of prayers for the dead found in 2 Maccabees 12:45-46, were viewed as inconsistent with the core doctrines of Christianity as understood by the Reformers.

Protestants also hold to the belief that the Old Testament canon was essentially closed by the time of Jesus, who never directly quoted from the Apocryphal books. Although the New Testament does include allusions to themes and events found in the Apocrypha, there are no direct quotations or references to these texts as Scripture. This silence is often interpreted as an indication that these books were not considered part of the authoritative Jewish Scriptures during Jesus' time.

The Value of the Apocrypha Today

It is crucial to emphasize that the Apocryphal books are NOT Divinely inspired and therefore lack the authority of canonical Scripture. As such, Christians are strongly discouraged from treating these texts as authoritative or equal to the Bible. While these writings may offer some historical insights into the intertestamental period, they should be approached with extreme caution, if at all.

The Apocrypha's lack of Divine inspiration means that its teachings and stories cannot be relied upon for spiritual guidance or doctrinal truth. Christians should instead focus their attention and study on the canonical Scriptures, which are truly "God-breathed and is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness" (2 Timothy 3:16). The words of the Apostle Paul in 1 Thessalonians 5:21 remind us to "Test all things; hold fast what is good." In light of this, it is best to hold fast to the canonical Scriptures, which alone are "able to make you wise for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus" (2 Timothy 3:15).

Conclusion

In conclusion, the Apocrypha represents a collection of ancient writings that, while historically interesting, did not meet the criteria for inclusion in the canon of Scripture as recognized by most Christian traditions. Their exclusion from the Bible is rooted in considerations of apostolic authorship, doctrinal consistency, and divine inspiration. It's crucial to understand that the canon of Scripture, as it stands today, is complete and sufficient to guide humanity to faith and salvation. As 2 Timothy 3:16-17 states, "All Scripture is inspired by God and is profitable for teaching, for rebuking, for correcting, for training in righteousness, so that the man of God may be complete, equipped for every good work."

For this reason, Christians are not encouraged to seek spiritual guidance from the Apocryphal books, which are not divinely inspired. Instead, believers should focus on studying and applying the teachings found in the canonical Scriptures, which provide all that is necessary for faith, practice, and salvation. The Word of God, as revealed in the Bible, is the ultimate authority and guide for Christian life, capable of making one "wise for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus" (2 Timothy 3:15).

Ultimately, our assurance of salvation and spiritual growth comes through faith in Jesus Christ and adherence to His teachings as recorded in the inspired Scriptures. By relying on the canonical Bible, we can be confident in our path of righteousness, knowing that God has preserved His Word to guide believers through the ages, leading them in "the path of righteousness for his name's sake" (Psalm 23:3).

Related Articles

- What Are the Gnostic Gospels?
- What Are the Apocryphal Gospels?
- What Are the Lost Books of the Bible?
- How Have Christians Come to Believe Differently?
- Should Christians Seek After Spiritual Enlightenment?
- What Is The Da Vinci Code and Is There Any Truth to It?
- What Is the True World Hierarchy and How Does it Cooperate for the New World Order?

Further Resources

- Explore Online Ministry Opportunities at Open Christian Ministries (USA)
- Explore Christian Business Services at the Center for Faith and Work (Rwanda)
- Pursue an Affordable Online Christian Degree at Open Christian University (USA)
- Kindly Share Your Question for Consideration in Future Articles. Click Here to Submit
- Ask a Question or Utilize Our Trained AI Bot to Craft Your Evangelical Article - Begin Here

← Back to blog

Comments (0)

Post Comment